Read the tips how to prepare for your exams. Match each text (1-7) with its title (A-K). Use only 7 titles. Write your answers in the boxes. There is an example (O) at the beginning.

How to prepare for your exams

- O. Being well-hydrated is essential for your brain to work at its best. Make sure you keep drinking plenty of water during your revision and on the exam day, too.
- 1. Don't leave it until the last minute. Time management is very important, so set up a timetable for your study and organize your time accordingly. You will feel much more comfortable and calmer.
- 2. Make sure you have enough space for your books and notes. Have you got enough light? Is your chair comfortable? If the answers are 'yes', you can start studying.
- 3. One of the best ways to prepare for exams is to practice on past versions. Download the exams from the last years and do them again.
- 4. Organise study groups with your friends and get together for a study session. You might have questions which they can answer and vica versa.
- 5. Parents, little brothers and sisters can be useful in the exam period. Explain an answer to a question to them. That will help you to get it clear in your head.
- 6. Keep your body and brain well-fuelled by choosing healthy food such as fish, nuts, seeds, yoghurt and blueberries. They will help you concentrate on things more easily.
- 7. Studying for more than 4 hours is not effective. When you feel tired, have a break and do some exercise or walk around your room.
- A Drink plenty of water
- B Take regular breaks
- C Eat brain food
- D Organise your study place
- E Practise on old exams
- F Give yourself enough time
- G Plan your exam day
- H Take notes and use diagrams
- Explain your answers to others
- K Study with your friends

Chatty family dinners are at risk of extinction as work and technology takes over

Seven out of 10 families don't sit down together for dinner every night. A survey shows that people don't want to put down their phones and turn off the TV while they are eating. Almost half of Australian families struggle to find enough to talk about over dinner, and may end up arguing instead of conversing. The research shows that 80 per cent of families sometimes sit in silence, and 92 per cent say their digital devices stop them talking to each other.

The study suggests work has a big impact on family togetherness. Fewer than a quarter of parents, who work full-time, eat with their children.

Overall, four in 10 Australian parents say that their families find it hard to connect and share conversation at dinnertime. Television, mobile phones, tablets, and tiredness are the things that most often get in the way of this.

However, the research shows that many parents want to do things differently, with 95 per cent agreeing that conversation improves a meal.

Psychologist Jocelyn Brewer said the findings reflected the way Australian life was getting busier and more stressful for families.

"It's not surprising to hear that 97 per cent of parents prefer meals where their family can laugh, connect, tell stories and share food," she said.

The survey showed the most common dinnertime topic was what's going on at school or work, followed by weekend plans. Only one in 10 parents liked politics to be discussed.
